BERGER

Morton J. Berger, piano teacher, passed away on February 25, 2017 at the age of 93. As a young boy, he was very musically inclined and studied piano with Leo Ornstein, the renowned pianist, composer and teacher. As a teenager, he played a few live concerts on the classical music station, WFLN in Philadelphia. However, his love of teaching would prevail and become his lifelong passion. Mort taught piano and music theory at Combs College of Music for approximately 25 years. He was still teaching students until his final days. A conservative estimate is that upwards of 1000 people have taken lessons with Morton Berger. Mort was stationed in Italy during World War II where he twice received good conduct medals. It was in Italy where he found his love of languages and learned to speak Italian fluently. He also spoke French, Spanish and Yiddish. After the war, he met his soul mate, Sylvia Pinsky, on the beach in Atlantic City. Theirs was an incredible love affair lasting 70 years, starting with a marriage proposal on their second date. He is also survived by 3 children, Bill, Barry and Susan, 8 grandchildren and 2 great grandchildren. Having a close family was very important to him. He put a lot of effort into making special family meals and enjoying vacations together. The true legacy of Morton Berger is to inspire people through teaching and learning. His motto was "Follow Your Dreams." Many years ago, on their first trip to Santo Domingo, they met a man speaking Italian in the coffee shop. This led to a friendship of 40 years. Angelo and Rosario and their family are lifelong friends; the kind of friends that become family. Mort and Sylvia retired in Florida 20 years ago to enjoy the warmer weather. They made many new friends and he became captain of the building where they lived. Nothing was too much trouble for Mort. If someone needed help, he didn't hesitate. But even in retirement, Mort never stopped teaching. He took delight in teaching a kindergarten class their first music lesson. It is so hard to say goodbye to someone so kind, gentle, happy, helpful and dear. You will be missed by many. One of his favorite sayings was... "Happiness is the only thing worthwhile in life." F. Scott Fitzgerald

TUCKER

Lucy Tucker, of Philadelphia, died peacefully at home on April 12. At her side were her children and their spouses, Amy Tucker and Stephen Tanzer, Jeff Tucker and Miriam Kogan Tucker, who cannot imagine a world without her. Her son Steven and her husband of 67 years, Gil, predeceased her. Once Lucy gave her love, it was yours to keep—she never quit on a friend and remained fiercely partisan whether you were family, or Hillary Clinton, or the Yankees in a lean year. Among the personal effects left on her bedside table were tokens of an abiding engagement with the world that did not flag with age; these included a bag of treats for the family dog and two small notebooks. In one notebook she kept a running list of the books on tape, both fiction and nonfiction, she consumed at an astonishing clip since losing her eyesight in recent years. In the other notebook she kept track of the many and varied charities to which she contributed annually: in 2016 these numbered 28 and ranged from The Smile Train to the Pennsylvania SPCA to Women for Women International. Smart, funny, sympathetic, Lucy lived to be of service to others. She could identify obscure character actors of the 1930s and '40s by their voices alone. She knew every Sinatra arrangement by heart, for she had heard them in person. She played a respectable game of tennis into her 80s. She joyfully disbursed all her earthly goods but retained her witty, indomitable spirit to the last, asking her nurse on the day before her death at age 93, "What is the estimated time of departure?"
