FRANKFORD

Leila Audrey Vizer Frankford (nee Epstein) was born in New York City while her mother (Mary Epstein, a model) was visiting with her sister. She was raised in Westmont, Pennsylvania located on a hill above Johnstown. Leila would often remind the family how Johnstown survived a flood. She had an older brother, Jack and sister, Beatrice. Her father, Louis Epstein, would market fruit and vegetables to local markets. She attended University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown, and worked as a hair stylist to help fund her studies. As the baby in the family, she was spoiled by her older brother and sister. When she and her sister entered a talent competition with her older sister, they won second place and dancing lessons with the famous and talented Gene Kelly. Leila moved to Philadelphia as a young independent woman where she had her own salon. She also became a member of the Philadelphia Piano Orchestra which would go on tour with twenty-four pianists, six piano tuners and six custom made square grand pianos and one grand piano. Two pianists would sit at each piano. The entourage traveled to many locations along the east coast that could accommodate them. Their final concert, sponsored by Bess and Harry Truman, benefitted Disabled War Veterans. She took advantage of many opportunities to learn and expand her horizons, taking classes at the Curtis Institute, Julliard and Moore College of Art. She was a founding member of Overbrook Park Hadassah, and when she moved to Wynnewood, PA became active and served as president of Main Line-Delaware County Hadassah. She was so proud of her 4 generation Hadassah life membership pin and she wore it on many occasions, showing off her family depth in the organization. When she moved to center city Philadelphia, she joined Rodeph Shalom congregation, their sisterhood, and the Council of Jewish Women. She was predeceased by "the love of her life" Clarence Frankford, who she adored and he adored her. They traveled the world many times over, watched from the 50-year line Eagle's football games which Clarence watched while she read a book! They attended classical concerts, Broadway shows and artist openings. She had her dreams fulfilled during her life with Clarence. Leila is survived by her son Mark Vizer and his wife, Sue, her daughter Robin Vizer Thatcher, and her grandchildren, Honey Vizer, Sarah Vizer Thorrick (James), Brian Glucroft, Mitchell Glucroft (Julie), Mandy Miller (Paul) and great grandchildren, Isidor Thorrick, Solomon Thorrick, Judah Glucroft, and Maisie Glucroft. Her grandchildren referred to Leila as Grandma Leila (Yiya) because she wanted to make sure as she aged that there were still people who called her by her first name. Services were private.
